

Precision Rifle Series has been around for quite a while and has grown in popularity recently, more commonly known as PRS. <https://www.precisionrifleseries.com/> It is basically a rifle match that tests your skills as a shooter with 7-9 stages per match. Each stage has a unique course of fire with varying targets all to be shot in a certain order or time limit. This is a positional type match where the rifle is supported on various props and most times has movement from position to position.

MoBeach is now hosting 3 Rimfire PRS matches per year. We hold them on a Sunday usually. There are targets from 35 yards out to 300 yards so some type of ballistic APP or a kestrel is key to being able to dial or hold over for the different distances for accuracy sake. Some of the APP's are free for your phone. Target sizes are anywhere from the 1/4" size on the KYL rack up to 12" x 12" that will be out at 300 yards, all steel rimfire targets specifically so they are easier to spot the misses and impacts.

The match course of fire usually requires about 100 rounds and you should have match grade ammo to be competitive, so bring 120 minimum enough for sighters also. There will be a sight-in period before the match at 50 yards, then a safety briefing will be held. Sign up for matches is held on <https://practiscore.com/> and in order to register, you need to make an account, it is free. You do not need to be a member of the PRS Rimfire Series to shoot the match. All are welcome. All scores will go onto Practiscore after the match.

To find our matches on Practiscore, click on matches to search for MoBeach PRS and scroll down until you see the upcoming match.

First match is March 24th so the rifle range will be closed that day, sorry. Schedule after that will be for April 28th and then August 11, 2024 so plan accordingly.

Any questions, Email me the match director Bruce May bruce@bmwoodworking.com or at mobeachprs@gmail.com Hope to see you on the range!
